COOKIE

Cookies are small text strings that visited sites by the user send to their terminal (usually the browser), where they are stored before being re-transmitted to the same sites at the following visit by the same user. In addition to cookies, other similar tools also subject to the provision of the Guarantor (web beacons / web bugs, clear GIFs or others) that allow the identification of the user or terminal. During navigation on a site, the user can also receive on his terminal cookies that are sent from different websites or web servers (so-called "third parties"), on which certain elements may reside (such as, for example, images, maps, sounds, specific links to pages of other domains) that are present on the site that he/she is visiting.

Cookies, usually present in large numbers in web browsers and sometimes with features of long temporal persistence, are used for different purposes: computer authentication, session monitoring, storing information on specific settings regarding users accessing to the server, etc. Further information on cookies can be found at www.allaboutcookies.org.

In order to get to a correct regulation of such devices, it is necessary to differentiate them considering that there are technical characteristics which distinguish them one from each other exactly on the basis of the purposes pursued by the user. The same legislator has also moved in this direction and, while implementing the provisions of Directive 2009/136/EC, has set out the obligation to acquire prior and informed consent of the users to the installation of cookies used for purposes other than purely technical (art. 1, paragrph 5, letter a), of doc. Lgs. 28th of May 2012, n. 69, which modified art. 122 of Code)
